

Butterflies & Moths

On the lookout for the immigrant Painted Ladies

This summer UK has seen the biggest number of migrant Painted Ladies, millions. It's continuously migratory with offspring making the reverse journey maybe even south of the Sahara very soon. The migration began this year with huge numbers in Cyprus and the eastern Mediterranean. Others moved through Spain and arrived in England.

However we haven't seen many here!

And the amazing Small Blues which have been discovered in Norfolk for the first time since 1910. Also spotted in other places where it has been absent for some years, Suffolk, Essex and Cambridgeshire.

However August may not be the best time to spot it.

And butterflies that could well be around in August

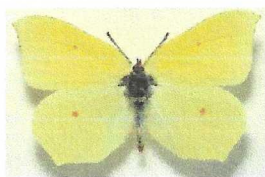

Small Tortoiseshell

Peacock

Small Blue

Brimstone

Large and Small Whites

Red Admiral

Gatekeeper/Hedge Brown

Meadow Brown

Speckled Wood
