August

- was originally named the Latin word for sixth Sextilis because it was the sixth month in the Roman calendar from the time of Romulus in 753 BC

Romulus and his brother Remus

- At that time the Roman calendar had only ten months in the year, the first being March and the last what we still call the tenth month ie December.

- Fifty years later when King Numa Pompilius added January and February to the Roman year it became the eighth month with only 29 days.

- It didn't have 31 days until nearly 700 years later in 46 BC when Julius Caesar created the Julian calendar.
- The following year it was renamed August in honour of the statesman and military leader Augustus who was named in Julius Caesar's will as his adopted son and heir.

It is said that he chose this month because it was the time of his great triumphs, including the conquest of Egypt.

I hate to think what could become of the name of November this year!!!
